For this new year there will prevail an emphasis on wellness, so you can expect to see (and get asked for) a lot of comfort and functionality in the space. It is the year for you to reconnect with yourself and give space for technology to improve your lifestyle. Check out some approaches that will be in vogue for 2023:

1. Warm and neutrals tones

The colour palette of a room can change the whole mood. Considering the right colour palette can be challenging, so you can trust that these tones will do wonders. It is proven that this kind of colour will provide you a serene atmosphere, where a calming attitude takes the crown.

2. Sustainability

A sustainable interior design will improve your well-being, reducing negative impacts on the environment and, as you may know, thinking about the future of our world is now more crucial than ever.

Taking the better advantage of our resources is one of the best ways of sustainability and this is where craftsmanship is needed. Also, sustainability comes from a mindful selection of furniture and decorative elements. When making your selection, go for furniture made with organic materials. This way, you are contributing to the production that doesn't use chemicals which may affect our environment's health.

3. Organic shapes

Known by irregular contours, organic shapes come from a place where the human and nature join into some kind of a balanced interior design, finding harmony between them. This way, the simplicity of nature, blended with the human perspective, has the ability of creating cosy spaces, searching for wellness in the home.

4. Unpredictable modern style

domkapa

Modern style is known for its simple and unadorned attributes, with clean lines and natural light and this one is not different. However, you will need to keep the space interesting, and our suggestion is to place an unpredictable object in it, such as biophilic elements or even art.

Make sure that these objects may be meaningful – functionality over fashion – and that they are picked having in mind sustainability and you are good to go.
